EDITORIAL JOTTINGS.

Ex-President Jefferson Davis has gone to Europe.

Every effort is being made in Virginia to encourage English immigration.

The recent Art Exhibition in Baltimore resulted so well that a movement is now on foot to establish there a Gallery and School of Fine Arts.

Danahall and Johnson made an aerial flight from Norfolk Thursday evening, in the presence of an immense throng. The Landmark says the ascent was the finest ever witnessed in that section.

It is thought the refusal of some of the Philadelphia Democrats to support Col. A. K. McClure, the Reform nominee, will insure the election of W. D. Stokes to the regular Republican nominee for the majority.

The renomination of Gov. Ingersoll by the Connecticut Democratic State Convention gives great satisfaction. It is the almost universal opinion in that State that he will be elected by a largely increased majority.

After a service of fifteen months in the Ashantee war but four English marines and none of the blue-jackets originally engaged remain, the rest having either died or been incapacitated for further service by the effects of the climate.

In speaking of the Great National Water-line, the Richmond (Va.) Enquirer says that if the Central Water-line through Virginia is ever put in operation, freight can be brought from St. Louis to Hampton Roads, for 34 mills per ton per mile.

Ex-Senator Pomeroy has been interviewed, and has stated his opinion of himself. He said to a reporter the other day that the popular clamor against him and for others was absurd, for "even Barabbas was preferred by a howling mob before Christ, but time has vindicated the Saviour," and that he (Pomeroy) will "be vindicated in time." Comparisons are sometimes odious.

The investigation into the cause of the recent collision in the Norfolk harbor between the steamer Elizabeth and the tug Woodward, by which Capt. Smith of the tug lost his life, has resulted in the decision that a Mr. Lane, a passenger on the tug at the time, was steering that boat, and that his want of knowledge of the movements of a vessel caused him to put his helm astarboard instead of sport.

A Bureau to look after the health of the country, and to help the States and Territories maintain a proper hygienic discipline among their citizens, is the latest extension proposed of the functions of the Government. It is to be called the Bureau of Health, to be established at Washington, and is to be in charge of a Federal Commissioner, at a salary of $4,000 a year. A Bureau of Matrimonial Infidelities will be next in order.

The fireless locomotives are now attracting much attention. It is more than probable that they will cause the omnibus and street car horse to retire to the shades of private life. General Beauregard, President of the New Orleans and Carrollton Railroad Company, recommends them highly. He says they are more manageable than horses, being more readily stopped and started. One dummy is equal to nine mules.

An exchange correctly says: "If half the rows occurred at our elections that are reported in England, the army and the navy would be called out to suppress the insurrection and put down the Ku-Klux."

The assertion that the Virginia Conservative members of Congress refused to go into a Democratic caucus of the members is now denied. Two of the Virginia Conservatives did enter the caucus, and sickness or absence from the city prevented the attendance of the others.

The immigration committees of the Virginia Legislature are considering the question of appropriating $50,000 to aid immigration to that State. This is taking a step in the right direction, and should the amount be appropriated and honestly expended, it will result in building up many of the waste places of that noble State.

The House Military Committee of Congress has decided on a bill for the reduction of the army, which policy, however, is against the reformation of nearly all the prominent military men in the country. The reduction might well commence in the South. We think the bayonet rule in the Southern States might easily be dispensed with without any danger to the Federal government or to the life or property of any class of citizens.

The Senate, on Friday night, concurred in the passage of the bill incorporating the town of Engelhard, in the county of Hyde. This town is named in compliment of our esteemed friend Major Jos. A. Engelhard, one of the editors and proprietors of the Wilmington Journal, and the compliment is altogether deserved by that gentleman.

Major Engelhard has been, for many years, connected with the press of North Carolina, and during that time has rendered most valuable service to the cause of good government. The paper which he, in conjunction with another good friend, Col. Wm. L. Saunders, editors, has won a strong hold upon the confidence and affections of the people of the State. They know it to be independent, honest and accurate and therefore give great weight to its utterances.

The amendment to the election law requiring a voter, when challenged, to prove his residence by some person known to the inspectors, was suggested by our cotemporary of the Journal and promptly adopted by the Senate. The idea is a good one and we hope the House of Representatives will concur.

Hundreds of illegal votes are cast in Eastern Carolina by men utterly unknown to the poll-holders, the only requirement being that the voter shall, himself, make oath as to his residence.

Let the House concur.

The Virginia press generally favors the proposed convention of publishers of that State, called to assemble in Richmond to discuss questions of peculiar interest to editors and publishers. The Petersburg Index-Appellant argues against the present loose and disjointed system exercised in the conduct of journalism, and truthfully says:

"People get from the newspapers a supply for which they are not willing to furnish a substantial demand.

People agree to pay a centage on the worth of what they get, and do not comply with the terms of the contract.

People do not consent to contribute in legitimate patronage towards the support of a paper, in anything like a fair equivalent to the advantages derived by them from it."

ONE WELLING, Professor in the Columbian University, New York, has been recently lecturing in New York city, to prove that the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence of the year 1775 was only a "mythus," and that no such event can be historically proven. This Professor would probably find profitable employment in visiting the "Hornet's Nest" for information as to this "mythus." The good people of Charlotte, however, have no idea of being cheated out of their historical memories, and the proposed Centennial celebration in that place in 1875 will be held, Prof. WELLING to the contrary notwithstanding. What say our Charlotte friends?

The recent elections in Great Britain seem to have been times of unparalleled strife and excitement. The telegraphic reports of scenes occurring at the voting places are disgraceful beyond expression. Riots and murders were of frequent occurrence, while at one point the ballot-boxes were stolen from the inspectors and not restored until re-captured by the police. Military force was called for by the municipal authorities of many of the larger towns, and their presence was actually necessary to suppress disorder and violence.

Our English cousins who have been in the habit of heaping ridicule upon republican institutions because of occasional acts of violence at elections held in this country, and who have uniformly ascribed such acts to the vicious tendencies of republican thought, are hereafter and forever estopped by the unlawful proceedings attending their own present contest. Remembering the proverb which forbids the throwing of stones to dwellers in glass houses, they must remain perpetually silent upon these subjects. After all, monarchies are not the improvements upon republics which they would have us believe.

WHAT shall be done for Louisiana? is a question which gives Senators "pause." CARPENTER avows his purpose to push his bill providing for a new election to a vote. MORTON objects because he desires to retain KELLOGG and his associated thieves in the offices they have stolen; and others hesitate because they fear to establish the precedent of Congressional interference in matters pertaining to the government of the States of the Union.

In the meanwhile the people of Louisiana groan under the burdens imposed by irresponsible authority and chafe under the deprivation of their rights as free citizens of the Republic. The condition of our sister State is altogether deplorable and we trust that some safe, speedy and satisfactory solution of the problem may be made.

One good result has come of the evil at least. The attention of the people of the country has been pointedly drawn to the evil result which follow Radical ascendancy in the Southern States. Senators who two years ago would have joyfully supported the usurpation because thereby they were inflicting punishment upon "rebels" now pause, responsive to a healthier public sentiment in their own section, and seek means for the redress of the grievances of a community which has heretofore been the object of their enmity.

In the Wilmington Journal of Thursday last, under the heading of "Editorial Correspondence," we find the following handsome compliment to Dr. J. M. WORTH, the Senator from Randolph:

"The State Debt has occasioned much discussion in the Senate. The settlement of the Public Debt of North Carolina is a long and dearly cherished project of the worthy Senator from Randolph, Dr. Worth, but thus far he has been able to accomplish nothing in this direction. That nothing has been done is, however, certainly not due to any want of effort on his part so much as to a well settled conviction that it is inexpedient now to do any such thing in the matter. If any man could persuade the Senate out of its convictions, Dr. Worth would do it. An earnest man, an honest man and a man of sound sense, one who has, beyond all question, the best interest of the State at heart and a good financier withal, when he gets up and advocates his bill for the settlement of the State Debt he produces a strong impression, and if anything could be done just now he would do it. But nothing can be done. Our creditors will accept no compromise that does not involve taxation to meet the interest on the amount to which this debt is reduced by the compromise, and we cannot afford to increase taxation while the effects of the great panic, if not the panic itself, are still upon us."

Without intending an adoption of the views here presented upon the subject of the State debt, the NEWS desires to add its emphatic endorsement to the kind things said of the Senator from Randolph. We know we speak the sentiments of his associates of the Senate when we declare that no man in that body has a larger share of the regard, confidence and affection of his co-laborers. Patient, faithful, earnest and honest, he commands by his sterling qualities of head and heart the esteem and the attention of his brother Senators. He has illustrated his devotion to North Carolina by his prompt and punctual attendance upon the sittings of the Senate and by the zeal and fidelity with which he discharges every duty imposed upon him. He deserves well of his State, and we trust to see her give a substantial recognition of his services.

Important Declaration.

In the United States Senate on Wednesday Mr. Thurman, of Ohio, the ablest lawyer in the body, perhaps, made the following declaration: "And now let me tell my friend (Mr. Logan) that there is not a business corporation in all this land—not a railroad company, not a banking company, national or otherwise, having an act of incorporation—that is not subject to the provisions of the bankrupt law."

Mr. Logan replied that Judge Blodgett had decided otherwise. Judge Thurman rejoined that other lawyers quite as distinguished agreed with him. Mr. Logan then gave his and Judge Blodgett's reason—as follows: "The bankrupt law provides its own mode of winding up the national banks. It in itself provides the manner in which the banks shall go into liquidation, or be wound up by a receiver; and inasmuch as it provides its own mode and manner of their being wound up and going into the hands of a receiver, it takes them out of the purview and meaning of the statute of bankruptcy, and the courts have so held; and that, in my judgment, is the law."

To which Judge Thurman made this overwhelming rejoinder: "I ask my friend to put this into his thinking cap when he considers this subject again; that the provision in the bankrupt law providing for winding up a national bank under the supervision of the Controller of the Currency cannot be held to take it out of the clause of a bankrupt law that had no existence for three years afterward. Your bankrupt law is the last legislative expression on the subject. The bankrupt law was passed three years after the national banking law; and this law, passed three years after the bank law was enacted, declares in plain words that every moneyed and every business corporation of this land shall be subject to its provisions. Sir, there is nothing in the country that will perhaps be found more efficient in making the corporations of this country—railroads, banks and business corporations of all kinds—perform their duties and discharge them well than the existence of a bankrupt law, that, while it is not oppressive, shall yet be efficient."

"I cannot give up my own judgment of words as plain as these: 'The provisions of this act shall apply to all moneyed, business or commercial corporations.' All moneyed, business or commercial corporations are; 'or commercial corporations'; and joint stock companies. If a bank is not a moneyed corporation, I do not know what it is; if it is not a business corporation, I do not know what it is."

Congress will probably so alter the bankrupt law as to leave this important point no longer in doubt.
